WIMBLEDON

This extension to house in a Wimbledon Conservation Area is currently under construction.

The proposal infills an area of sunken garden to the rear of the property outside the lower ground floor kitchen. The end result is a much larger and more useable integrated kitchen, dining and garden room. Large rooflights, rear glazing (with French Doors) and a side window bring natural light into the new space and allow uninterrupted views to the garden.

The view out to the garden is framed by a planted green wall to the left and a series of landscaped planted terraces to the right which mediate between the high level lawn and low level terrace, giving the extension the feel of a true garden room.

The extension uses large scale steel framed windows in a grid pattern producing a classic Modernist feel which also ties in with the Victorian glazing bars of the original house. The same aesthetic has also been applied to the windows of the existing side extension bringing unity to the rear elevation.
